Small Animal Care: CGS Training Workshops

In an effort to enhance & strengthen medical skills for small animals, CGS Veterinary Care Hospital recently conducted a series of workshops and participated in the World Small Animal Veterinary Association (WSAVA) Conference.

To address the need for critical medical care, a specialised CT Scan workshop led by Dr Velvan, an Associate Professor from Madras Veterinary College, was attended by 35 medical specialists from across the country along with the CGS medical team. This workshop provided training on the latest trends and procedures concerning small animal CT scans. Simultaneously, in New Delhi, a health talk 'Preventive Health Care in Dogs and Cats' engaged the local community, addressing daily healthcare routine queries from pet owners.

Additionally, CGS Hospital organised a workshop focused on emergency and critical care for small animals, led by Dr Adesola Odunayo, a senior researcher and associate professor from the University of Florida. This workshop equipped participants from across the country, with the knowledge and skills required to handle emergency cases effectively. Dr Adesola was greatly impressed with CGS Hospital's facilities and recommended a rotatory observership programme with the hospital.

Dr Vikas Kumar Chauhan, Assistant Director, CGS Hospital, had the privilege of representing the institution at the WSAVA Conference in Lisbon, Portugal, which brought together 3,800 veterinarians from around the world, including experts from top universities. The conference emphasised orthopaedics, neurosurgery, radiology, soft tissue surgery, ophthalmology, and feline asthma.

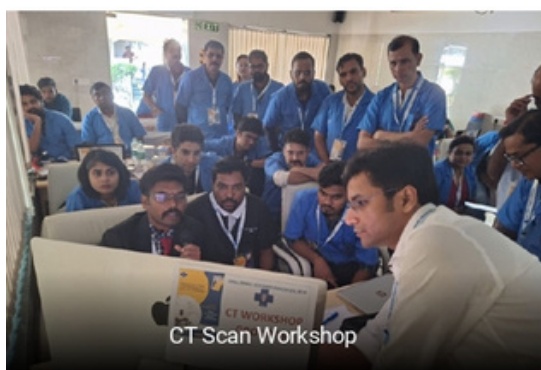

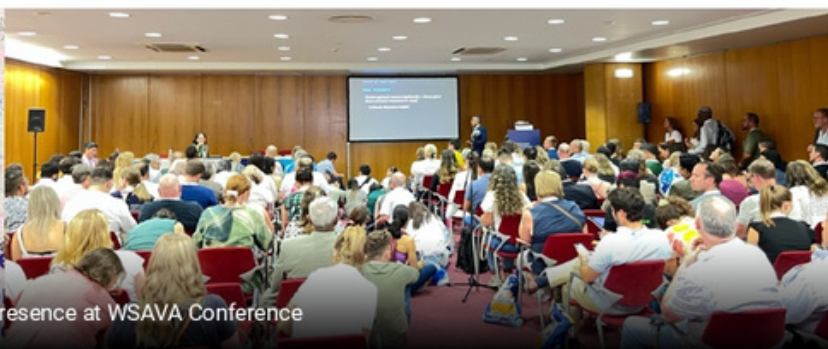

"With these international collaborations, the medical veterinary space in India will benefit immensely. We look forward to many more such opportunities for knowledge sharing", says Dr. Chauhan
